1) In 2006, the government passed the Child Marriage Restraint law. The features of the law are as follows:-

- i) It enforced the prohibition of Child Marriage
- ii) It aimed to provide adequate relief to the people who were forced into Child Marriages.

- iii) It aimed to provide protection to the compromised citizens to ensure their safety.

2) The Satyashodhak Samaj aimed to propagate the ideas of equality among all castes and sections of society and aid in the upliftment of untouchables and other castes. It aimed to help integrate the untouchables into mainstream society and educate women.

It was founded by [Dr. B. R. Ambedkar] & Baktrirao Phule

- Other reformers translated the texts and announced that even Manu had allowed women to live as widows.
- These efforts helped people realize and resist the various evils of Indian Society.

5) Many women pioneers raised their voices against the evil injustices of Indian Society. Some examples are as follows :-

- Pandita Ramabai :- i) She was known as the rebel champion of women.
ii) She was one of the 10 delegates of the Session of Congress in 1899.
iii) She advocated for the education of women.
- Dayanand Saraswati :- i) She founded the Arya Samaj which opened schools for girls in Punjab.
ii) She advocated for education of women and widow remarriage.

- Jyotirao Phule: i) She was another pioneer of women reforms who called for the abolition of the evils of Indian Society
- ii) She wrote a book titled "High Caste Hindu Women" which captured the plight of women in most of Indian Society in detail.

• In this way, Indian Women raised their voice and helped themselves in their upliftment through ceaseless efforts and actions against the injustices of society.

- 3>
- Dr BR Ambedkar wanted to integrate the untouchables in mainstream society. By launching the temple entry movements, he enabled the participation of the untouchables and other compromised sections of society into the temples.
 - This sent a strong message to the people in India. It helped to accelerate the integration of the untouchables into society which was Ambedkar's main motive.
 - People were more willing to accept the untouchables, which allowed them to regain their rights.

4> Many reformers translated and reinterpreted the ancient Indian texts in order to support their efforts.

- Raja Ram Mohan Roy reinterpreted the ancient texts and declared that the practices of Sati, Child Marriage, Polygamy were not sanctioned by the ancient texts.
